

EDPY 559 Introduction Qualitative Research in Education
Week 3 Activity B: Photographs as a Source of Data
By Lisa C. Yamagata-Lynch
Last Updated June 18, 2013

Got to the following websites to learn about Haley Morris-Cafiero's longitudinal social experiment through photography.

- http://www.salon.com/writer/haley_morris_cafiero/
- http://www.huffingtonpost.co.uk/2013/04/25/haley-morris-cafierophotographers-wait-watchers-project-pictures_n_3154734.html

You will find that Haley did not engage in her social experiment as a qualitative researcher, but her work provides a rich data set for qualitative analysis. You will find her photos at:

- <http://haleymorriscafiere.com/>

Based on Haley's work, what can you learn from the photos? What new questions about human behavior come to your mind? How do the photos help answer your new questions if at all? What have you learned about the situation that Haley's photos captured?

Be prepared to share your observations to others in class.

Then think about if you were to incorporate documents/photographs into your research how would you go about doing that.